- GADN Achieves First Manifesto Goal!

In our Manifesto, GADN has been asking the UK Government to make violence against women and girls a foreign and development policy priority by appointing a Minister on violence against women and girls whose brief covers FCO, DfID, and MoD. We are delighted to announce that thanks to the heavy lobbying by GADN member organisations – in particular ActionAid UK – because the Government have announced Glenys Kinnock as the new minister on global violence against women:

<http://www.number10.gov.uk/Page22721>.

While this is an incredible accomplishment, GADN believes we must ensure cross-party support as a permanent post and we hope that GADN members will continue to emphasise this success with other parties and put it into their manifestoes.

2. GADN Members' Update

- ActionAid UK has worked tirelessly on lobbying the UK government to appoint a Minister on Violence against Women and Girls, which came to realization this month. To learn more about why this is so important and deserves cross-party support, read their report. Destined to fail? How violence against women is undoing development.
- One World Action has been featured in an article by the Commonwealth Secretariat for the findings in their new gender and trade report.
- CAWN has published its latest E-Bulletin for Spring 2010. Check it out for information on their work, events, publications and announcements in Central America and the UK.

- Oxfam, through its affiliates in Great Britain and America, has been awarded a grant of just over $1m from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation for much-needed research into collective action of women smallholder farmers in sub-Saharan Africa. Read more about it here.
- GADN member Carolina Gottardo (One World Action) has been published in Open Democracy for an article on CEDAW and Bolivia as well as an article on Opuz v. Turkey, a European Court of Human Rights case on domestic violence.
- Invitation to Tender to undertake research looking at the role of the church in responding to sexual violence against women, for Tearfund UK
Tearfund UK is looking for a consultant to undertake research looking at the role of the church in responding to sexual violence against women (SVAW), particularly in conflict and post conflict situations. This piece of work in the first phase aims to reflect on the role the church has played to date in 3-4 countries where SVAW is largely prevalent and the second phase of this action research seeks to support the church to play a crucial part in preventing SVAW. To apply or get more information, please email Ari Clowney. Deadline for submission of tender is 31 March 2010.
- WOMANKIND's 'Speaking out for Women' campaign asks MPs and prospective MPs to keep women at the heart of their politics.

6. Campaigns/Calls for Papers

- Amnesty International UK Campaign: 100 years on, what's changed for pregnant women?
Ten years ago, world leaders committed with a UN Millennium Development Goal to cut the rate of maternal deaths by 75 per cent between 2000 and 2015. With just five years to go, we are way off track. Now is the time for world leaders to start showing real political commitment to make sure that an improvement to global maternal health is a priority. Earlier this year a group of organisations submitted a ‘manifesto for motherhood’ to the UK party political leaders to highlight that they have a role to play.

We will be holding them to account on this, and we’re encouraging you to play your part too. Over the next few weeks we’re encouraging as many people as possible to upload a picture with them and their mother onto our flickr page. We will then take those pictures and form them into a giant card which we’ll give to the Prime Minister later this year. Visit www.amnesty.org.uk/mums for more. If you get tweeting about this issue, use hashtag #mumsmatter

- Womankind Worldwide Campaign: Speaking Out for Women

The decisions our elected representatives take every day — on international development, on foreign affairs, on defence and trade — have a direct impact on women around the world. For example, the Department for International Development has been supporting WOMANKIND's work with the Afghan Women's Resource Centre for five years. Thousands of women and girls have attended essential literacy classes, received health care — and played a significant part in national peace-building efforts.

By sending special campaign postcards — and signing up online at www.womankind.org.uk — British voters will send a strong message to politicians that the next government must honour the UK's commitments to women's rights — enshrined in national legislation and international agreements.

- New Women in Afghanistan Network

Act on 8 and Women's Campaign International has launched the Women in Afghanistan network. The network is a free resource for people around the world engaged in gender equality, to communicate and collaborate with women in Afghanistan. Act on 8 and WCI are delivering training programs for 600 women to take part in the political process in Afghanistan for the forthcoming election and this platform will provide on-going connectivity, tools and support for Afghan women. Please pass this on to all individuals and organizations interested in empowering women's voices.

- Anti-Slavery International Campaign: Home Alone: End Domestic Slavery

Home Alone, invisible to society and unprotected by labour laws, domestic workers are some of the world's most exploited and abused workers- and many are in slavery. Anti-Slavery International is calling for the International Labour Organization (ILO), which is part of the United Nations, to adopt a new convention on domestic work which would protect the rights of domestic workers worldwide and ensure they are treated equally. In just a few months time at their annual conference in June, the ILO will discuss creating a new convention on domestic work. This represents an historic and rare opportunity to increase legal protection for domestic workers, reduce their vulnerability to slavery and end their abuse. More information on the campaign and our available resources can be found here at www.antislavery.org/homealone.

- Call for Submissions: Citizenship and the Commonwealth Conference (10-12th November 2010)
